Subject:

Proposed ordinance #2015-6, designating Tinker Field an Orlando historic landmark.

Summary:

Proposed ordinance #2015-6 would designate Tinker Field an Orlando historic landmark pursuant to section 65.720, Orlando City Code. Like the field's National Register of Historic Places designation by the U.S. Department of the Interior, this Orlando historic landmark ordinance will recognize the designated portions of the historic baseball playing field.

But unlike the National Register designation, the Orlando historic landmark designation will protect the historic integrity of the field by requiring a "certificate of appropriateness" before the demolition or removal of the designated portions of the field, or for "any construction, alteration, restoration, or relocation of any permanent improvements to [field], and for any permanent use inconsistent with the [field's] historic use as a baseball field." (Prop. ord. #2015-6 at line 117.)

Applications for a certificate of appropriateness are reviewed by the City's historic preservation officer and the City's Historic Preservation Board, before being approved, approved with conditions or denied by the Orlando City Council.

The proposed ordinance will allow for the restoration, repair, and maintenance of Tinker Field, and will also allow for the installation and maintenance of monuments, signs, plaques, underground infrastructure and utilities, and memorial objects. To support the continued vitality of Tinker Field as a public open space, the ordinance will also allow for temporary uses such as festivals, concerts, and other temporary and periodic public uses.

Fiscal & Efficiency Data: No fiscal impact.
